THE LEGEND OF THE SLEEPING GIANT

From Thunder Bay to Steamboat Springs to our own Mesabi Iron Range, there are several Native American tales about a great giant that roamed the land. Ours is Ojibwa in origin and tells of a great white figure that roamed this area, blowing a cold mist and leaving snow and ice in the wake of his footprints. The native people called him Mesabi, the Ojibwa word for giant.

Mesabi wandered a vast area gathering up all its fortunes. When he grew old and tired, he lay down to sleep, covering all the riches he had accumulated. Over time these treasures seeped into the earth, and as he slowly disappeared water filled his footprints and forests grew across the hills and valleys where he once slept.

Immense riches in the form of wood from the forests and iron from the land have been found across this stretch of Northern Minnesota. Through the naming of The Mesabi Range, The Mesabi Trail, Giants Ridge resort area, The Legend golf course, and The Sleeping Giant Sports Bar & Grill his legend lives on.
