

THE LEGEND OF THE SLEEPING GIANT

From Thunder Bay to Steamboat Springs to our own Mesabi Iron Range, several Native American tales tell of a great white figure roaming their area, blowing a cold mist, and leaving snow and ice in the wake of his footprints. Ours is Ojibwe in origin. They called him Mesabi, the Ojibwe word for giant.

Mesabi wandered a vast area gathering all the land's fortunes. When he grew old and tired, he lay down to sleep, covering all the riches he had accumulated. Over time these treasures seeped into the earth. Over time Mesabi faded away, leaving beautiful lakes in his footprints and dense forests and rich iron deposits throughout the hills and valleys where he once slept.
